FERRANDINI WINS NOTABLE VICTORY FOR PRIMARY LAW

of an election was exceeding its authority. Both sides appeared relieved yesterday that the matter was definitely settled. Frank Ferrandini, who had waged a single-handed fight against the inclusion of the annexation referendum, expressed his satisfaction at the outcome, but disclaimed any personal feeling against his fellow-members of the City Democratic Committee. Chairman Miles M. Martin and Committeeman R. R. Florence, who appeared as lawyers for the defense, expressed no intention to pursue the matter further. It appears to have been a bloodless battle, with a bloodless victory, in which Frank Ferrandini triumphed over friends.

All the interested persons were present yesterday morning when Judge Crump rendered his decision. The audience included a score or more of the most prominent political men in the city. Clyde W. Saunders, chairman of the plans committee, the report of which gave rise to the whole controversy, occupied a seat in front. Mr. Ferrandini was present with attorneys Charles V. Meredith, Edgar T. English and Kirk Mathews, who had argued his application for injunction before the court.

HISTORY OF CONTROVERSY.

The division in the ranks of the City Democratic Committee, made whole again by yesterday's decision, grew out of a request from the Central Trades and Labor Council several weeks ago asking that the City Committee submit to the people at the coming election the question of extending the corporate limits of the city. The labor people favored a direct submission, calling for a vote for or against annexation.

mission, calling for a vote for or against annexation.

The request was referred to the plans committee, of which Clyde W. Saunders is chairman. On May 22, after repeated conferences, the plans committee submitted to the full committee a majority report favoring a referendum on the lines requested. Mr. Ferrandini headed a minority which opposed the recommendation on the ground that the City Democratic Committee had no right under the Byrd law to submit such a referendum.

As a substitute to the majority and minority reports, the committee adopted a resolution directing the printing on the ballots of the words: "For or against referendum of annexation ordinance," with the idea of shifting the central issue to the City Council, which, if the referendum had carried, would have been directed to submit to the voters the direct question: for or against annexation. Against the enforcement of this resolution Mr. Ferrandini began court proceedings last Friday securing yesterday the restraining order from Judge Crump.

Demurrer.

In entering his decision, Judge Crump reviewed the complaint set up by the plaintiff as well as the demurrer filed by the defendants. A copy of his decision follows: "The court is of the opinion that the said demurrer is not well founded, and it being further the opinion of the court that the said City Democratic Committee had no power or authority to order or to have the words 'for or against referendum of annexation ordinance' or words of similar import, to be placed upon the ballots to be used at the city primary election to be held in the city of Richmond on June 12, 1913, and the court being further of the opinion that the injunction prayed for in the said bill of complaint should be granted, it is, therefore, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that the said City Democratic Committee, and each and every member thereof, and their agents or attorneys, be and hereby are, enjoined and restrained from in any way or in any manner distributing, using, giving away or putting with any ballots containing said words, or words of similar import, until after said city primary election, calling for a vote for or against annexation."

Arrangements for Primary.

J. M. Purcell, for the special committee on ball, reported that he had secured the City Auditor for Thursday night to receive the primary returns. The list of judges and clerks as printed herewith was adopted. Mr. Saunders predicted that it would be an all-night affair getting election returns, as there are a large number of names to tally on each ballot. In lieu of the usual supper, therefore, a committee, consisting of Messrs. Jennings, Purcell and Taylor, was named to provide coffee and sandwiches.

After adjournment, members of the committee discussed the annexation matter informally, though in better temper than had prevailed before the city election; that Walter G. Duke, as secretary of said committee, be, and hereby is, especially enjoined and restrained from printing any ballots to be used in the said city primary with the said words thereon, and from in any way or manner distributing, using, giving away or putting with any of said ballots until after the said city primary election, as long as any of the said ballots shall have thereon legible the said words, or words of like import; that the said persons and each of them be restrained and enjoined from using or allowing for use at said primary election any ballots except those having as are authorized under the statute of Virginia, entitled, 'An act to establish and regulate the holding of primary elections, to pay expenses of same, to secure the regularity and purity of the same, and to prevent and punish any corrupt practices in connection therewith.'" at once, Mr. Saunders being recognized. He moved that the action of the chair be sustained and the thanks of the committee be tendered him. Secretary Duke, after reading the formal injunction order of the court, objected to the wording of the Saunders resolution. He was willing enough to thank Major Martin, but did not wish to stultify his former position in opposing the placing of anything but the names of candidates on the ballot. He had been retained by the Chamber of Commerce in the annexation fight. Chairman Martin stated that he had accepted service of the injunction for the various individual members of the committee, so as to save piling up the costs in the case, by the court order, will fall on the City Democratic Committee.

here upon receipt of the news that suit had been started. Mr. Eastman indicated, however, that the company would refuse to dissolve. "While there is a prayer for dissolution, as is usual, I am informed in all such cases," said Mr. Eastman, "it is believed that full compliance with the main specific demands for changes of short story, which May Robinson cleverly

That Quaker Herb Extract is a Permanent Cure for Catarrh

It Is Proven By the Statement From Mr. J. W. Foy That It Certainly Is.

Mr. J. W. Foy says: "For the last eight or ten years I have not been in robust health, and have suffered from catarrh of the head and stomach, and neuralgia of the eyes and throat, suffering from headaches all the time. After taking everything that I thought would bring relief, I purchased the Quaker Herb Extract at Humphries and Webber's Market Square Drug Store, and after using the bottle my headache ceased. I have used nearly three bottles, and now feel entirely well."—J. W. Foy, 662 Sixth Avenue, New York.

While Quaker Herb Extract is a permanent cure for catarrh, it cures stomach, kidney, liver and bladder trouble, rheumatism, male and female complaints. Here is a report of Mrs. Sadie Tyler, who resides at 414 Commerce Street, S. W., Roanoke, Va. Mrs. Tyler said:

"For the past three years I have been suffering with pains across my back, chest and pain in my limbs, had belching and bloating of the stomach and was in a weak, nervous condition. At the steps I have taken everything that I could buy, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I purchased one bottle of the Quaker Herb Extract, and after taking it, my pains and aches are gone, have no more belching or bloating, and feel better in general health than I have for the past three years; in fact, I feel like a new woman, and certainly shall praise the Quaker Herb Extract for what it has done for me, and I recommend it to all women who are in a weak and run down condition, or who are suffering from any such cases as I have been suffering from." The Quaker Herb Extract is purely a herb remedy, and has no chemical meeting. Reports were generally circulated that Charles V. Meredith, who appeared in the court proceedings as the associate of the attorneys retained by Mr. Ferrandini, was retained by the Chamber of Commerce. Others had heard that he was retained by certain candidates who did not care to go through a strenuous fight for office, only to have the primary declared invalid. Everything seemed to be heard except that Mr. Florence, who appeared with Major Martin for the committee, said he had been told that Mr. Meredith asked a continuance in another case, giving as the reason that he had been retained by the Chamber of Commerce in the annexation fight.

Chairman Martin stated that he had accepted service of the injunction for the various individual members of the committee, so as to save piling up the costs in the case, by the court order, will fall on the City Democratic Committee.

trade methods freely offered by this company will successfully meet all criticism and satisfy the trade at large and the government.

"However, co-ordination of the manufacture of films, plates, papers and cameras must be continued. No company that is unable to furnish products in all of these lines can hope to compete with the great foreign manufacturers."

In compliance with the government's petition, the company, according to Mr. Eastman, intends hereafter to operate its various retail stock houses under its own name. It also will abandon its "exclusive sales policy."

Diverting Comedy Amusingly Played.

Winter's rather foolish but frigid little "last act" cast no chill last night upon the opening performance of the Lucille La Verne Company's seventh week of the summer stock season.

On the contrary, the customary Monday night audience chuckled, chortled and laughed through two hours and a half of light farce-comedy, and grew warm in its own amusement.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," a dramatization of Anne Warner's clever short story, which May Robinson cleverly few seasons ago with much success, was wisely chosen by Miss La Verne as the vehicle with which to bear back to the star's position in her own company.

Aunt Mary, it will be remembered, is a very strong-minded, independent old woman who lives in the country, and rules her household with an old-fashioned rod of iron. A much loved, much spoiled young scapegrace of a nephew causes her a great deal of annoyance, and even more expense, all of which she bears with more or less patience until he is charged—falsely, as it later appears—with a more flagrant offense than usual, when she casts him off, disinheriting him.

The boy goes to New York, while the aunt remains at home, presumably to grieve. One of his irresponsible friends writes to the aunt that the boy is ill, whereupon she hastens to him. Since when she comes to the house, she learns that the young rip is quite well, the boy and his chums determine that they will make her believe that he concocted the scheme only because he wanted to see her.

The plan works, and the youngsters proceed to show her the town to the best of their ability, aided and abetted by the girl who is the boy's sweetheart, and the sister of one of his friends, with the consequence that the old spinster becomes enraptured with the life, the boys' friends, and the girl. And so her rejuvenation is accomplished, and with it, the happiness of the boy and his sweetheart.

It is all very light, but very amusing, clean and wholesome, and will doubtless prove one of the most popular offerings of the stock season.

Besides the reappearance of Miss La Verne in a prominent part in the play, since she is the Aunt Mary—which was heartily recognized and approved by her many admirers, which recognition and approval she, in turn, rewarded by giving an excellent acting performance, several other features marked the bill.

Little Parke Patton returned to Miss La Verne's wing and played the boy's sweetheart, with girlish ingenuities, encouraged by the cordiality with which she received upon her first entrance. Edna von Hugel handled the character part of Lucindy with a sustained and clever appreciation of the value of the role; Eleanor Habers as the girl from Kalamazoo was exceedingly well done; Festival Asylum was at home and easy as the well-bred boy, Fredrick Beane, as a matter of course, was beyond criticism as the hired man, and Nan Crawford distinguished herself by a really and in two or three in the first act.

The chorus was pretty good, and it must be remembered that the singers had little time to rehearse, and this will certainly be most improved by to-night.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" is not a musical comedy, as is presented by the La Verne Company, is a diverting farce-comedy amusingly presented.
